YEARBOOK

1935

Our Year Book is something tangible to which we shall turn in later years to refresh our lapsing memories with the invaluable and happy days of our school life.

It will remain forever a record of our academic, athletic, and social achievements. May it be as much an inspiration to future classes as it is at present to the one departing.

DEDICATION

A TRIBUTE

THE teachers of the high school who had the privilege of knowing May Mawhinney Stanfield will carry with them always the memory of a gracious personality. They will think of her, too, with admiration as one who, because of her infinite tact, her generosity of self, her warm appreciation of the other person's point of view, was able to make smooth the rough places of daily routine. The senior members of the faculty must often have envied her poise, her serenity, her simple dignity in the confusing and trying circumstances of busy life. The junior members must have found her a worthy example. She was highly efficient in her duties, yet that efficiency was not attained at the sacrifice of human values, kindness of heart and gentleness of manner. The quick sympathetic response in her ready smile was but the outward indication of the beauty within. Surely we must believe that such a spirit cannot pass but has merely been given a broader scope for greater and nobler accomplishment.

TO THE ## CLASS OF 1935

While we have set you to work,
Have we lightened your hearts to dreaming;
To see, above the clouds and murk,
The march of the far stars gleaming?

A dream is a sure defence,
A climb, and a high endeavor;
From slings of time and sense
A buckler and shield forever.

For you are flung wide the gates,
And this is the blessing we bless you—
Into your world that waits,
Go—with a dream to possess you.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

HARRY SHOOSHAN

TEACHERS, CLASSMATES:

We have just received a thrilling tribute from our friends and the school at large. With the outside festivities over, we are once more together, and a feeling of regret comes over us as we realize that the time is not far distant when we shall have to part from the school and from each other for

"Friends depart, and memory takes them
To her caverns pure and deep."

It is fitting, therefore, that we publicly voice our indebtedness to those who unstintingly gave of their best to make this hour of triumph possible and whose interest in us has inspired us to seek life's riches. Under their guidance, our class has distinguished itself for its variety of talents. Without undue exaggeration we can say that the future will magnify the achievements of the past.

The Class of 1935 has the added distinction of having the three-hundredth anniversary of secondary school education come the year of its graduation. This graduation does not mark the end of our education, though . . . "laborious indeed at first ascent, but else so smooth, so green, so full of goodly prospect and melodious sounds on every side that the harp of Orpheus was not more charming."

CLASS ORATION

Myron Wallace

Classmates:—

Seven years ago tonight, in 1928, the Class Orator of that year began his speech in this manner:

"Classmates:—

The gates are open! This vast, confusing, twentieth century world stretches before us, and with little fear, but great self confidence we venture forth into this world of vexing problems. . . . We see an era of unheard of prosperity, of new standards of living . . . a time of free thinking and free expression. . . . Fate has placed us in this ultra-modern age."

Would that we, in this, our last formal assemblage before our graduation, might be able sincerely to repeat those words!

The world is just as bewildering; free thinking and expression have become even a little more free. But the gates, once flung wide, have been blown almost shut by the winds of Adversity, and their steel riveted hinges, once diligently oiled, have been rusted into disuse by the storms of Depression. And through those gates, indeed, in the words of Edmund Gosse,

"The future comes like an unwelcome guest."

Some of us, knowing all along that our need after high school would be immediate employment, will be faced with "NO HELP WANTED" signs. Many, assured a few years ago of the opportunity for further education, are now confronted with the somewhat disheartening prospect of having to seek jobs—not positions—instead of preparing for college. Others, after having experienced a bit of the stimulus of college associations, will be forced to drop out to search for employment. Yet others, where previously a fairly comfortable college existence was in view, have four years of struggling and self denial to encounter. Not a calamity, perhaps, but definitely not the most hopeful prospect to which to look forward, especially with no work in sight after graduation. This is not a pessimistic outlook. It is purely factual; and although conditions may be improving, the process of building up is much longer and more difficult than that of tearing down.

During your years here, Classmates, we have heard many times of the value of a definite goal, of the power of honesty, of the respect of reliability, of the worth of faithfulness to duty. Essential as they all are, we must have more to live by than mere moral abstractions. We must translate them into action. In these days of the survival of the fittest of the fit, we must first realize—with a more mature understanding of the words—that it is necessary for us to force our respective ways through hard work, at any job, whether it be the setting of a curbstone or the mapping out of an advertising campaign. Yet, more than that, we must keep faith with ourselves. We are not all going immediately to be successful; for some of us it will be quite a considerable length of time before we shall be able to do that which we desire. It is necessary, in such times of stress and bitter disappointment, to grit our teeth and look ahead. If we would scale even the foothills of success, we must climb hard, never tiring. We cannot gaze back lovingly until our work is done, else the fruits of our labor will disappear with the swiftness of Eurydice.

In the words of Richard Horne:

"Ye rigid plowmen! Bear in mind
Your labor is for future hours,
Advance! Spare not! nor look behind!
Plow deep and straight with all your powers."

CLASS SONG

Sylvia B. Robinson

In the Brookline halls of learning,
We have bound four golden years;
They will be an inspiration
Forever shining clear,
As we travel on life's journey
With this sacred memory,
Like a torch in the dark they will guide us
Through each day of every year.

We have watched the crimson sun set
At the close of each full day,
And we've marched on, never fearing,
Bearing strength which we have gained;
We've fulfilled our aspiration
And we turn to face the east,
With a smile for the dawn of the future
And the goal which we've attained.

BEYOND THE WALLS

Sarah Cauman

Footbeats through the dim halls of the past
Strike the cold stones and leap with hollow sighs
Along dark, arched corridors. The Keeper
Walks amid reverberating echoes that re-echo
Into ever-throbbing silence.

Here are the archives of a faded history,
And here, the crumbled sepulchres of those
Long since returned to dust. The Keeper
Lifts the rich-wrought key on chains
About his waist and turns it in the mighty lock. . . .

Now will the steely hinges creak as the great gates
Shudder apart by halting inches?
Sound does not notate that still solemnity. The Keeper
At the threshold waits, and from the tower
Cries forth a brazen voice its lonesome peals!

They come—tumultous throngings crowd the way—
They come in eager innocence, with sun-drenched brows
And laughter still unblent with knowing tears! The Keeper
Will turn back the well-worn lock and bar them
In the stronghold of a finite Time.

Here is no present. Tomorrow is a yesterday. Beginning is an end.
Life is a death of shadowed archives, crumbling sepulchres,
A little dust, a lingered dream. The Keeper
Will walk once more through stilly corridors
And fling the great gates wide again. . . .

Beyond the walls, eternity wheels faster
In its wind-blown course. A sun perpetual
Strikes ever-reaching moon-shafts with hot glory,
Stars scatter radiance forever through quick-sheeted rain:
There is eternity and liberty and laughter. . . .

For a world yet unconceived and yet unborn. . . .

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

Know all men by these presents: that we, the Class of 1935 of Brookline High School in the town of Brookline and in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being sans mind, but realizing the uncertainty of the hand of God, do duly, and we hope legally, make this our last will and testament.

After proper and long-due payment of our dues we bequeath and devise as follows:

First: We, the Class of 1935, leave the school a better and undoubtedly bigger place than when we found it.

Second: We leave the sum of $2.31 to be spent in buying new leaves for five-year students to turn over.

Third: Captain Abe Aronson leaves a football team that not only scored a touchdown, but trounced Newton decisively.

Fourth: The Harvard-bound debos (which by the way is the masculine for debs) leave all their hair to be stuffed for footstools for female Freshmen with Housemaid's Knee.

Fifth: Mary Dolbeare, the class's outstanding athlete, leaves her ability to Izzy Peraner.

Sixth: We leave the Junior boys the privilege of looking bored, the girls that of being sophisticated.

Seventh: Myron Wallace leaves his modesty to Stanley Livingston.

Eighth: Harry Shooshan leaves his oratorical ability to Melvin Freedman.

Ninth: We leave "Rickey" Bonnelli still looking for the fellow that changed the sign "1635—Boston Latin School—300 years of secondary school education—1935" to "1635—Richard Bonelli—300 years of secondary school education—1935."

Tenth: Rae McKnight takes her blond beauty with her, leaving a school that is confident that with it she could even make a fortune.

Eleventh: The Trojanite leaves Mr. Packard three new jokes.

Twelfth: Janet Dubinsky leaves her shoes to be filled by Pauline Miller. Whom else would they fit?

Thirteenth: We, the pioneers of Mr. Kepner's new book, leave those outlines over which we have labored many a pleasure-less night to our successors and their successors.

Fourteenth: We leave the lunchroom a sadder, quieter, cleaner, and wiser place.

Fifteenth: We also leave the above a pair of much needed salt-shakers.

Sixteenth: Myron Cohen leaves his certain something to Leon Rogers.

Seventeenth: The Mr. Hyde part of our nature leaves Will Ober behind to frighten all the little children.

Eighteenth: We leave hopes for a four-period day.

Nineteenth: The Sagamore staff leaves the Challenge, or does it?

Twentieth: Edith Levine leaves her non-stop locquaciousness and garrulity to Henry Rosen.

Twenty-first: To Barbara Baier we leave a copy of that famous proverb, "Where there is smoke, there is fire."

Twenty-second: Louis Wyman leaves his Virginia in a state of beauty.

Twenty-third: Stephen Randall and Harry Shooshan leave good examples.

Twenty-fourth: A certain Senior leaves Millie Kroeger in good hands.

Twenty-fifth: We leave a well-started epidemic of the measles.

Twenty-sixth: We bequeath to the statue of Venus a good right arm so that she can give herself a finger wave.

Twenty-seventh: Speaking of statues, Sarah Cauman leaves Minerva feeling quite a bit relieved by her absence.

Twenty-eight: Ann Hicks leaves "Two Tickets to Georgia."

Twenty-ninth: To the fellow that has charge of blowing the no-school whistle we leave an alarm clock.

Thirtieth: To Miss Bliss we leave that little but remarkable state of Rhode Island, where men are men, and where it is even rumored that the Mayflower landed.

We hereby nominate and appoint as executor or rather as co-executors Mr. Webber's twins and request that they be exempt from giving any surety on their bond as such it may be.

Signed

THE CLASS OF 1935

In testimony whereof, we, the Class of 1935 have signed, published and declared this to be our last will in the presence of the undersigned who at our request and in our presence and in the presence of each other have hereto subscribed their name as witnesses to said will.

THE HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1935

AN ALLEGORY

We scribes, having undertaken the honorable task of recording for posterity the four-year pilgrimage of this class through the Plains of Endeavor, now, as we stand together on the Hills of Understanding, present it to you, a history.

There lived about the far fringes of the Plains of Endeavor a people who, although confident in their small learning, were sunk placidly in a dearth of both knowledge and understanding. In September of the year nineteen hundred and thirty-one a New Prophet appeared to them from the plains. Gathering them all together, he spoke to them, saying:

"You have come to that time when you must make the first great pilgrimage. Under my constant guidance shall you journey over those long plains that make a path to the Hills of Understanding. Growing wild and free on these plains, but encased in thorny shells, shall you find sweet fruits, fruits whose rich pulp will impart knowledge to you. The way is long and the fruits are difficult to find, so prepare yourselves well."

So spoke the New Prophet. The people heard and soon were started on their pilgrimage.

Early in the first year, the New Prophet decreed that they should choose from among themselves such ones as should be their leaders for that year. Duly, the people voted, electing Philip Ford their president; Norma Nasmyth, their vice-president; Janet Dubinsky, secretary; and James Hogg, their treasurer.

The first year, the journey being new and the search for knowledge tiring to the pilgrims, was devoted chiefly to becoming acclimated to the new surroundings and duties. We record several of the pilgrims as being especially ardent in finding the fruits of knowledge in the first year. Sarah Cauman, Norma Nasmyth, Janet Dubinsky, Albert Reiss, and Robert Leslie received high honors in scholarship. In this year, also, were some of the followers of the prophet placed in the two existing courts of high tribunal. Harry Shooshan and Philip Ford were given seats of the Court of Justice and Norma Nasmyth became a member of the Teacher-Student Council.

The sun moved on its cycles above the level Plains of Endeavor, drawing with it the changing seasons. And then the pilgrims found themselves in the second year of the journey. Once more they chose their officers, selecting James Hines to be their president; Norma Nasmyth, the vice-president; Janet Dubinsky, the secretary, and Myron Wallace, their treasurer.

It was in this second year of the pilgrimage that the people began to take interest in and join certain societies known as 'clubs'. By the end of the year the larger part of them were members of one or more clubs. One pilgrim, Janet Dubinsky, although only in her second year, was made secretary to the French Club. Both Janet Dubinsky and James Hines were given seats in the Court of Justice. Harry Shooshan became the pilgrims' representative in the Teacher-Student Council.

It was in the third year. We scribes must give pause to renew our breath, for there is much to be told of the pilgrims in this period. Verily were they assuming the cloaks of knowledge; they were nearing the Hills of Understanding and could see their sun-crowned tops. The names of these pilgrims were coming to be known far and wide throughout the plains.

One day, while they were traveling, the New Prophet appeared to them. He gathered them together from the fields and the stretches of the road and spoke to them. He told them of a new plan: from that time forth there should be only one group known as a class and that should be the graduating class; the other groups should be arranged in houses. Our pilgrims were to be known as Packard House and Akers House. The people accepted the change and went about choosing the House officers. We record that Philip Ford was elected president; Charles Kerins, vice-president; Janet Dubinsky, secretary; and Leon Rogers, treasurer in Packard House. The same fine leaders were chosen to these posts in the following year. In Akers House were chosen president, Theodore Plotkin; vice president, Jean Leslie, secretary, La Reine Gardner; treasurer Frank Taylor.

In this third year the pilgrims became increasingly prominent among the clubs which they had entered. During this year two new organizations of great worth, the Dramatic Society and the English Club, were started. Harry Shooshan, Myron Wallace and Edith Levine became members of the executive committee of the Dramatic Society. Sarah Cauman, Charles Osgood, and Norma Nasmyth became vice-presidents of the English Club. In the French Club, Janet Dubinsky was elected vice-president, and Harry Shooshan became the treasurer. The Spanish Club had Jack Vincens as its secretary. Robert Leslie was made the treasurer of the German Club. Also in this year, another fine pilgrim won wide fame by virtue of being our people's representative to the meeting of the National Red Cross held in Washington. This was Myron Cohen.

Although the interest evidenced by the pilgrim in the clubs was great, scholarship, the everlasting search for knowledge, claimed the studious attention of all The second two years of the pilgrimage found Janet Dubinsky, Norma Nasmyth, Sarah Cauman, and Harry Shooshan securing the highest honors for their scholastic ability. In the third year, Charlotte Sherrill was made the representative to the Teacher-Student Council. Myron Cohen and James Hines took chairs in the Court of Justice. In this year, too, did Jeannette Thaxter win the pilgrims' prize in the history essay; Janet Dubinsky won the award in mathematics, and Harry Shooshan received the James Murray Kay Award for his excellence in Prize Speaking.

Throughout the entire journey, the pilgrims had their news, humor, and literature written and arranged for them by a group of people publishing a newspaper called The Sagamore and in the last year a magazine, The Challenge. By the third year many of the pilgrims had worked their way up to the staff of the newspaper. Charles Osgood and Stuart Goldenberg had become managing editors and later in the same year were made associate editors-in-chief. Sarah Cauman was the news editor, with Irving Helman as her assistant. Aaron Levine was the feature editor, and Dick Little was printer's assistant.

There were those who gave freely of the musical talent throughout the entire pilgrimage. Skilled with their instruments, they caused joyful sounds to be heard over the plains, and their music brought ease to the pilgrims' hearts. Sarah Singer, John Nagle, Norma Nasmyth, Myron Wallace, Eli Malkin, Harriet Nye, Harris Blauer, Anne McEvoy and Sylvia Robinson were heard performing in the plainspeoples' orchestra. Dick Little, Greta Adams, William King, and Lester Davidson played strong and fine in the band.

So passed the third year.

It was the fourth and last year. The pilgrims were climbing among the Hills of Understanding; they had eaten well of the fruits of knowledge. The officers of Packard House had been chosen. The older pilgrims of Akers House had elected Stephen Randall as their president; Betty Willis, their vice-president; Martha Turner, the secretary; and Jack Vincens, the treasurer. Then came the last great election of the pilgrimage, the choosing of the officers of the graduating class. At the given time the pilgrims came together from all places to vote for their choice. When the votes were duly counted and recorded, Harry Shooshan had been chosen president; Betty Willis, vice president; Janet Dubinsky, secretary; and Myron Wallace, treasurer.

The climb to the hills in the last year and the worry of many as to what lay beyond them kept all of the pilgrims with the exception of one from excelling in scholarship. This pilgrim was Jeannette Thaxter. Yet many were near securing the highest honors.

But all of the time of the pilgrimage was not spent in laboring. At many places along the road were found fair fields, with tufty grass and blue water. When the pilgrims would come to such spots on the plains, they would desport themselves and play many games of competition with the pilgrims of other places. It is well to cite some of the men who stood forth from the others as great sportsmen. Robert Grenier was the able leader of the track team, which made such a remarkable record for itself. This team was brought to scoring prominence by such men as Leon Rogers, Charles Kerins, and Larry Anderson. In football, Captain Abraham Aronson and Lynn Tyler stood out as mighty men of valor. It is fitting at this point in the history that the scribes cry forth in loud and happy tones that the football players of our pilgrims overcame in monstrous combat the team of another group of pilgrims known as the Newtonites. Our pilgrims boasted such fine golfers as Louis Wyman, Joey Quinn, and John Murphy, and had such courtsmen as Philip Ford, Myron Wallace, Maurice Rosnosky, Robert Malone, Stephen Randall, and Robert Rosoff. The pilgrims also acclaimed the captain of the swimming team, George Ware, and an able performer in the sport, Blake Thaxter.

The girls, too, had their athletics, and there were many sportswomen of high rank and calling. In field hockey there were Captain Betty Willis, Norma Nasmyth and Katherine Mulvihill. Then we record as prominent, Betty Green, captain of basketball; Doris Goldman, captain ball; Anna O'Brien, one of the swimming team; and Katherine Mulvihill, captain of the tennis team. Three girls won their B's, Mary Dolbeare, Katherine Mulvihill, and Betty Willis. Six girls received two B's. These were Evdokia George, Betty Green, Myrtle Niccolls, Norma Nasmyth, Caroline Reagan and Meave Sullivan. Many pilgrims received one B.

In this last year many of the pilgrims held officerships in the various clubs. We find Janet Dubinsky, president, and Sarah Cauman, secretary of the French Club. In the Spanish Club, Rita Gillis was elected president; Charles Osgood, vice-president; and Stephen Randall, secretary. The Spanish Club sponsored the great and colorful Pageant of the Americas and, with the money thus raised, laid down the foundation for a yearly Spanish prize. Harry Shooshan was president of the Dramatic Society and Myron Wallace was its treasurer. Rachel McKnight, Myron Wallace, Sarah Cauman, Harry Shooshan, and Myron Cohen featured in that highly fanciful and humorous play "Big Hearted Herbert," which was attended by many of the pilgrims. In the English Club, reorganized and greatly increased in size and scope, Sarah Cauman was elected president. The English Club made popular pilgrimages to the Wayside Inn and to Concord and Lexington. The pilgrims' German Club which acted as host to the Greater Boston League of German Clubs this year, had the following leaders; Robert Leslie, president; Robert Grenier, vice-president; and Stuart Goldenburg, treasurer. The Debating Society, with Arthur Klein as its president; Harry Shooshan, its moderator; and Robert Leslie, its secretary, had a highly successful season this last year, winning all its debates.

The pilgrims had four representatives in the Teacher-Student Council in the last year of traveling. Stephen Randall was made the president of this council. Betty Willis, Myron Cohen, and Janet Dubinsky were members. James Hines was elected Chief Justice of the Court of Justice, while pilgrims Myron Cohen, Steprhen Randall, Charles Willis, and Charlotte Sherrill had seats in the court. Myron Cohen was made the captain of the marshals, while his able lieutenant was Rachel McKnight.

At the beginning of the last year, the editor-in-chief of The Sagamore proposed the idea of publishing both a newspaper and a magazine. This proposal was carried by a close vote of eight to seven in the staff. The pilgrims received this innovation favorably. In this last year the pilgrims were well represented on the staffs of the publications. Charles Osgood was the editor-in-chief of The Sagamore and The Challenge; Irving Helman was the managing editor of The Sagamore; Sarah Cauman was the managing editor of The Challenge; Aaron Levine, feature editor of The Challenge; Myron Wallace, sports editor of The Sagamore; Libby Rose, staff artist; Paul Cusick, circulation manager; and Dick Little, head printer and compositor.

Throughout the long years of endeavor, one man had been closely associated with the lives of the pilgrims; to the pilgrims we gave the constant guidance and aid of a Good Shepherd. Since the formulation of the House Plan had Mr. Cocoran been the pilgrims' wise guide.

And so, with a brilliant, carefree dance and a colorful Class Day, the last year is done.

For the last time the New Prophet gathered the pilgrims together on the highest crest of the Hills of Understanding. When the assembled before him were quiet, he drew forth from his robes a scroll written in letters of gold. And lifting his voice, he spoke to them.

"Throughout the long journey there were some of you who excelled all others, both in scholarship and in participancy in outside activities. The names of these pilgrims are enscrolled here. I read you the scroll. 'Entered into the Honorary Society in the third year: Harry Shooshan, Janet Dubinsky, Sarah Cauman, James Hines, Myron Wallace, Norma Nasmyth, and Myron Cohen. Entered in the latter part of the same year: Robert Leslie, Rachel McKnight, Edith Levine, Myrtle Niccolls, Norman Dain, Aaron Levine and Bruce Ehrmann. Entered in the last year: Herschel Friedman, Harriet Nye, and George Mawhinney. The president of the Honorary Society in the last year, Harry Shooshan. The secretary of the Honorary Society, Sarah Cauman.' These pilgrims are deserving of the highest praise."

The New Prophet lowered the scroll. When the murmur of acclaim had died away, he spoke again, his voice ringing strong and clear from the summit of the hill.

"Now I must leave you. There are others needy of my guidance in crossing the plains. Before you lies a great world; It is yours to better, yours to conquer! You have made the first great pilgrimage; you stand now on the summits of the Hills of Understanding. But before you lie high mountains to be gained, the mountains of success! You must strive ever onward to those mountains!"

The voice of the New Prophet moved out over them and was gone. The pilgrims raised their arms to the skies and cried out, with the souls in their voices:

"We will! We will! We will!"

Our history is ended.

THE HOUSE PLAN

The fundamental plan underlying all organization and administration in Brookline High School is the securing of what is best for the individual student. His interests are paramount. This fact assumes a greater importance with the increasing growth of the school. Four years ago the high school administration determined that mere size should not mean the giving of less attention to the individual boy or girl; that the restricted opportunities of the traditional "class" designations and distinctions should yield place to a more representative, democratic, active, and efficient organization. This reasoning led to the development of the Brookline House Plan.

At present the school is organized as five groups: Lincoln, Roberts, Shailer, Packard, and Akers Houses, each enrolling approximately 475 students in home rooms located in definitely assigned sections of the school building. Generally speaking, the students in each House remain with the same home-room teachers throughout their school career. In other words, the first-year boys and girls who enter Lincoln House this year will, with few exceptions, remain with their fellow-students and home-room teachers for at least four years. Regardless of diploma requirements, students continue in the same social grouping and participate in various House activities. At the end of every five years rotation begins, the fifth-year House enrolling the graduates of the grammar schools. Akers House this September, therefore, becomes the House of our entering, first-year students. Similarly, Packard House, with its House Master, will enroll the five-year students.

The purpose of the House Plan is to permit a student to assume, to a greater degree than formerly, an interested and active participation and leadership in the affairs of the school community of which he is a part. Each member of this community knows from the beginning that he belongs in a vital way to a tangible unit in the school. As a loyal member of this unit, or House, he pledges his loyalty to its ideals and its code. As a citizen in the group, he acknowledges his responsibilities and recognizes his duty in meeting obligations of his citizenship. Each House is distinguished by its colors, its motto, its significant emblem and its shield. House orchestras, athletic and dramatic groups, service committees, clubs, and similar organizations provide for participation in expressing citizenship. House teacher-student councils, marshal forces, House and home-room officerships, and like positions permit the assuming of leadership. In brief, the unit organization provides ample, practical ground for community interests and real life experiences.

The House names challenge attention. Each represents an individual who has contributed markedly to the advancement of the school. The ideals of each will become the ideals of the respective Houses: together with the outstanding character-building contributions of each, these ideals will furnish the impetus for the House traditions. Early in each new school year a dignified ceremony permits each House again to pledge its fealty to these ideals and traditions, and to rededicate itself to the larger and more inclusive school loyalties.

Advance means change. The completion of the House Plan has resulted in an increase in student and teacher leadership, has aroused more enthusiasm in and for the school, has improved the general morale, has enlarged opportunities for service, has developed friendly rivalries in various activities, has brought to House Masters and students numberless individual, personal, and confidential contacts, heretofore impossible of realization, and has given to the many opportunities previously reserved for the few.

Under the House Plan the entering student is not lost in a maze of new experiences in an extremely large family. He finds in the House Master, his home-room teacher, and the guidance counsellors, interested and sympathetic individuals who help at once to bridge what otherwise might be a wide gap between the elementary and the secondary schools. As he advances, he will become a more useful citizen, his interests will broaden, he will learn better how to meet standards, his successor will challenge further effort, his loyalty to his House will be reflected in a greater loyalty to the school. Solidarity in each House will mean greater solidarity in the school. Exactly as in the world at large the human equation must be the controlling factor in achieving any worth-while democratic ideal, so within the schools of today and tomorrow must the life value of actual experience replace outworn tradition.

AKERS HOUSE

Mr. Winifred C. Akers was Headmaster of Brookline High School from September 1913 to June 1930. He was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1893, with the degree of A. B. He taught in Holyoke, New Britain, and various places before coming to Brookline. During his administration student government was instituted. The three departments, the Teacher-Student Council, the Marshals, and the Court of Justice became respectively the legislative, executive, and judicial divisions of school government. They were begun in 1918 and have been outstanding features of Brookline High School life. The Honorary Society was also developed while he was Master, and has become one of the most inspiring influences in the school.

PACKARD HOUSE

Mr. John C. Packard prepared for college at Wilbraham Academy, was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1886, receiving the degree of A.B. and in 1889 was made a Master of Arts with honors in Mechanics. He came to Brookline in 1890 to be Sub-Master of the High School and Head of the Science Department, which latter position he now honors. From 1900 to 1901 he was acting Headmaster. He spent one year abroad in the study of European schools. He is the author of "Everyday Physics", a laboratory manual, and of sundry articles in various scientific magazines, besides being a lecturer of note on popular science. He designed the John C. Packard Laboratories, which were named in his honor.

The Reverend William H. Shailer spent the early years of his life in teaching. Afterwards he was graduated from Madison University in Hamilton, New York. He studied at Newton Theological Seminary nearly a year, was in control of the Literary Institute in Suffield, Connecticut, and was later ordained. He became the pastor of the First Baptist Church in Brookline in 1937. He was the moving spirit in establishing the first high school in Brookline and served as a member of the school committee fifteen years, having been its secretary for eight years and chairman when he resigned. Shailer Hall was named in his honor.

ROBERTS HOUSE

Dr. Arthur W. Roberts was a graduate of Harvard University from which he received three degrees, A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. He was the first one to receive the last degree for only two years' work. He began teaching in Cincinnati, Ohio, and later went to Penn Charter School in Philadelphia, where he remained until called to Brookline High School in 1900 to become head of the Classical Department in which he taught both Latin and Greek. The following tribute aptly describes his career here: "For a quarter of a century this great teacher poured out so copiously the riches of his natural endowment, high achievement, and ripe experience that he did much to fashion and establish noble traditions for our institution." Class Day celebration is the result of his suggestions. Roberts Auditorium is named in his honor.

LINCOLN HOUSE

William H. Lincoln received his education at the Boston English High School and at Chauncy Hall. After his schooling had been completed, he became a shipping merchant and soon took an active interest in Brookline affairs. He was on the Park Commission for nine years, and for a number of years was president of the Brookline Savings Bank. Mr. Lincoln was not only a trustee of Wellesley College from 1899 until his death in 1935, but he was also interested in the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge. However, the main reason for naming Lincoln House in his honor is his interest in Brookline Schools, especially in the high school. For twenty-two years he served as a member of the School Committee, and during this time, it was in a large measure due to his influence that Brookline High School attained the excellent standing it has at the present time. Lincoln House may feel rightly proud of the man for whom it was named.

This year the name of this organization has been changed from The Teacher-Student Council to The School Council. Under the new constitution the membership consists of eleven students and five teachers. Meetings have been held twice a month throughout the year and many matters which concern the welfare of the school have been discussed. Particular attention has been given to neatness in the lunch room. The Student's Handbook was revised and published for distribution in September. During an assembly program in March the Council explained the Court of Justice and Judge Williams addressed the school. The president of the Council represented Brookline at the State Convention of Teacher-Student Councils held in Holyoke.

The Court of Justice tries to show the student his mistakes and to make him a better citizen.

The cases that come before this court are usually serious and are referred by the Headmaster or the School Council. In making its decisions, the court considers the welfare of the student. All decisions must have the approval of the Headmaster.

If a student should ever feel that he has been wronged, or if in his school life he has some difficult problem to face, he will find this court is very willing to help him.

This year the Girls' League has continually stood for the ideals of "Service, Sociability and Standards." One achievement of the year was a series of vocational talks. At Thanksgiving and at Christmas, gifts were sent to the Brookline Friendly Society, the Tuberculosis Clinic, and the Haynes Memorial Hospital. At Dramatics the candy girls contributed more than one hundred dollars to the Scholarship Fund. League members have been on duty in the Offices and in the Library. A larger Girls' League Orchestra has been organized. The League Room has been redecorated, with promises for some additions next year. The success of the year is due largely to the loyal support of the faculty advisers and the splendid coöperation of the 690 Girls' League members.

FROM PAST TO PRESENT IN THE BROOKLINE HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY

When you were looking for "Harper's Classical Dictionary", did you come across five, squat volumes on "Greek and Roman Antiquities" in very fine print, edited by William Smith in 1849? If you did, you were using some of the "Library Apparatus" bought for the high school about ten years after its foundation in 1843, while it met in Old Stone House still standing next to the First Parish Church.

In 1856, when the high school occupied its second building at the corner of School and Prospect Streets, the library was enjoying a "slow but healthy growth." The number of volumes was 240. This Library was equipped with a table, book cases, and chairs. The Greek and Latin Lexicons in our library have written on the title pages, "For the Teachers' Table 1870."

Shailer House occupies most of the high school building erected in 1895. The library occupied about half our old library, now the Headmaster's Office. The two long tables that we are still using were part of the furniture "specially constructed" for that room.

In September 1917, a "separate school library with an efficient librarian in the person of Miss Mary Davis" was opened as one of the first school libraries in Massachusetts. The town expended five hundred dollars for new books and magazines. In January 1923, Miss Davis returned to public library work, being now Librarian of the Medford Public Library. She was succeeded by the present librarian, Mrs. Siebens. For several years the Public Library furnished part-time librarians to be at the high school library a few hours daily. For four years Miss Stack has been a full-time assistant librarian.

Our old library, built for 700 pupils, was inadequate for 2000. In the fall of 1933, the C. W. A. commenced the reconstruction of Shailer Hall for which plans had been made some time before. Through the help of the P. W. A. we were able by September 1934 to move into the beautiful library we are now enjoying. By another year we hope to have it furnished and equipped so that we may point with pride to it as second to none of the high school libraries in this country.

| November 26 | Opening meeting, featuring short plays. |
| December 20 | Christmas meeting. Competitive games, songs, records. |
| February 14 | Winter meeting. Lantern slides. |
| April 9 | Spring meeting. Moving pictures shown and explained by M. Perrin. |
| May | Final meeting. Play. |

One of the main objectives of the Cercle Français this year was to have as much student participation as possible. This was accomplished through group singing, large working committees, and competitive games. The average member was able to feel that he was an important factor in the organization and not merely a passive member. Another objective was to have the students acquire an ease in speaking French, which can be developed only through constant practice. Oral games and speeches aided in that score, whereas short plays helped in understanding the French tongue.

A PAGEANT OF THE AMERICAS

"A Pageant of the Americas" presented by the Spanish Department commemorated Pan American Day. There were two performances, the first on Thursday afternoon, April 11; the second on Friday evening, April 12. Representative scenes from the histories of both North and South America were shown by colorful tableaux and dances. The presentation included a cast of more than 100 persons, several exquisite dances, and approximately ten picturesque tableaux.

In the group was a ceremonial Rain Dance of our American Indians. History was lived as Columbus planted his cross on the shores of San Salvador and as Cortez and Pizarro invaded the rich lands of the Aztecs and Incas. In contrast to the minuet danced in the manner of an old reception at Mount Vernon were featured a Spanish-Mexican hat dance and Tango.

The final scene depicted the crowning of Miss Pan America, attended by George Washington, and Bolivar and San Martin, liberators of South America. The scene closed with a vow repeated by the entire cast pledging friendship between North and South America.

MR. JEWETT

MISS REYNOLDS

With the advent of the House Plan, the Guidance Department has been privileged to witness a much wider range of opportunity to serve the boys and girls in the Brookline High School. The Director wishes to express in this Year Book his deep appreciation of the fine spirit of coöperation manifested by the House Masters, the Attendance Supervisors, and the home room teachers. There has been this year a great satisfaction in the hearty coöperation of the English Department. Through the kindness of Miss Spaulding and the English teachers, it has been possible for the Director to speak directly to every boy and girl in the English divisions.

In Room 23 you will find every facility we have been able to arrange for your assistance: college catalogues, special school booklets, career charts and a special library of fine books. During any study period or after school, students are welcome. Catalogues and books may be borrowed for brief periods provided Miss Reynolds is given a record for them. All of these resources are equally available to your parents. Any parent is welcome, and in order to render the greatest service the only requirement is a definite appointment with the Director.

The Director wishes to emphasize his earnestness for your welfare. Your study problems, your athletic desires, your social interests, your college plans, your failures, your successes, your occupational interests, your hobbies are all matters about which he concerns himself with you alone. Confidences are respected, advice is carefully given, the truth of any situation is sought, and suggestions for your consideration are offered.

Decisions are for you and your parents to make—it is for us to help.

In the spring of 1934 the High School Stamp Club was organized. At its meetings, the members report on new issues and various collections, trade stamps, and have auctions. In order that others in the school may know about stamps, the club has purchased a stamp catalogue, which is available in the school library. The club had one of the first exhibits in the new library where members displayed some very valuable collections.

The Red Cross Council obtained its usual amount in its annual drive for membership. Dresses were made by some of the girls. Many eye glasses were collected. The junior delegate, Norma Green, was sent to Washington as the Boston Metropolitan Chapter's representative. Money was given to the Milk Fund and other worthy charities.
